

LOOKS AS THOUGH SANTA HAD MADE A MISTAKE—leaving such a big rocking horse for such a wee girl. But this modern horse of Troy, which seems to await its giant rider this Christmas morning, only serves as a sign post for the Toy Town Tavern in Winchendon, Mass., which is the center of America's wooden toy industry. It is reputed to be the largest wooden rocking horse in the world and is faithful in every detail to the familiar, though of course smaller ones, that are sold by the thousands annually in the country's toy shops.

Keynotes

Kadel & Herbert

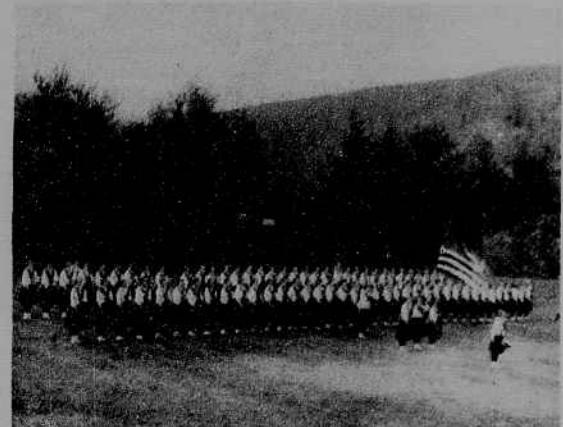

AN HEROIC COUPLE. Mrs. William Brown assists in fastening a lifebelt about her husband, veteran coxswain of the lifeboat crew at Cresswell, a particularly stormy and dangerous part of England's Northumberland coast near Newcastle-on-Tyne. Mrs. Brown is one of a trio of brave women, the ages of whom total two hundred and fourteen years, who assist at all the launchings of the lifeboat when the crew is called to the rescue of a shipwrecked vessel. One of the women has not missed a launching since 1874.
